

LTX 3229: Legal Orientation

This course presents a survey of the legal principles governing the United States legal system, property law, business entities and agency, wills, trusts and estates in a context that sets the stage for later study in required and elective tax courses that depend on those principles. This course also introduces students to the use of decisional law, statutory law and principles of statutory interpretation. This course is limited to and required for all M.T. candidates and international students.

Credits: 2.0